

Questions you should ask...

before buying a gazebo.

1. Do I need a building permit?

Possibly. Massachusetts state building code requires a building permit for any building over 120 square feet. However your town may have requirements that differ from state law. Ask for details.

2. What if the site isn't accessible for the delivery truck?

No problem. Hometown Structures will build on-site if the structure cannot be delivered fully assembled.

3. What should I set me gazebo on?

Hometown structures recommends a stone pad for any free standing structure. Other suitable options are concrete pads and sonotubes. Placing a structure on the ground is not recommended, except it may be suitable for gazebos smaller than 100 square feet.

4. Can my gazebo be built to coordinate with my house?

Our gazebos have numerous options to give just the look you'd like. Browsing the Quality Built Gazebos brochure, you'll see the personality of each gazebo portrayed, and get a feel of what will coordinate best with your home.

5. What quality features should I look for?

We believe that quality features should be included – not optional. That's why we include a pressure-treated floor systems on every gazebo. Every gazebo meets or exceeds Massachusetts state regulations, PLUS, we have engineered architectural drawings available. From floor to peak, detailed craftsmen construct a gazebo that will last – not a season, but a generation.

6. What is your guarantee?

Hometown Structures guarantees structural integrity and snow load of every gazebo we sell for a period of 10 years. This guarantee applies to the first owner only.

7. How do I know what size structure I really need?

Nobody ever said the purchased a gazebo too large! Think about the largest parties you entertain. Then envision where your furniture will be placed inside. Add some extra space – if it's crowded your gazebo won't even be used.

Invest in experience. Celebrate the memories. Your family & friends will thank you.

627 Southampton Road, Westfield, MA 01085

(413) 562-7171 • sales@hometownstructures.com

